

Unique features and safe transaction policy of Seconds to Sell

TRANSACTIONS

A more discreet, secure and transparent way of doing transactions with each other on peer to peer-sites has long been needed. Seconds to Sell was created with the users' need for transparency and discretion at the forefront. Its wall feed system allows potential buyers to view all previous bids and comments posted between other buyers and the seller. This allows all users to have full insight into the details of each deal. It has been entirely left up to the users to set and agree to their own terms any deals that take place. The wall feed is archived and creates a legally binding document of the transaction should any foul play arise.

PERSONAL SECURITY

The risk-laden handing out of personal contact information has also been made safer by being left up to the user. The ability to choose who they would like to share it with from the list of potential buyers effectively eliminates the chance of needless calls and explanations stating the item has already been sold. The ads are automatically made inactive when a buyer has been chosen. This is a break from and an improvement upon the already established ways of other peer to peer market systems (i.e. Blocket).

EASE OF USE

Simple and self-explanatory; users can find it easy to upload multiple ads to their profile. With an integrated "inbox", the users can also edit and administrate their own ads.
